Hasegawa M
Uninterrupted wishes toward conservation of nature, life and humanity have inherited the Japanese Journal of Conservation Ecology.................................................................1

Original Articles
Miyazaki Y, Mitsushashi H, Osawa T
Planning a management program for expanding bamboo forests based on scenario analysis.................................................................3

Sarashina M, Yoshida T
Predation impacts of four invasive frogs in Hokkaido, Japan, assessed by an index of relative importance ...........................................15

Sugimura K, Uzawa M
Bryophytes as an indicator of the habitat of Phragmites australis communities in Myoginohana Marsh (Ukishima Marsh), Ibaraki Prefecture, Japan........................................27

Review
Matsuba M, Akasaka M, Miyashita T
Marxan for systematic conservation planning: principles and applications...........................................................................................................35

Report
Nakano M, Uehara K, Urabe M
Habitat and breeding season of striated spined loaches on the northwest coast of Lake Biwa.......................................................49

Miyamoto Y, Fukumoto K, Hatakemaya K, Morii A, Maeda A, Kondo T
The present state of endangered freshwater mussel (Cristaria plicata) populations in Tottori Prefecture, with special attention to the relationship between the larvae and host fishes ..............................................59

Fujii S, Uesugi R, Yamamuro M
Habitats, floral morphs and escape of Nymphoides peltata and re-examination of its genetic diversity in Japan ..........................71

News
Koike F, Koike K, Nishida T, Kawamichi M
Evaluation of hazards posed by alien organisms threatening native plants and communities using paired comparisons based on questionnaires answered by specialists ........................................87

Katsuki T
Cerasus speciosa in coastal forests of the Sendai Gulf, Tohoku Region, Japan ..................................................................................101

Dohke T
Midterm review of the Aichi Biodiversity Targets – introduction of the Global Biodiversity Outlook 4th and decisions of the CBD-COP12 (Part 1) .........................................................105

Instructions for Authors ................................................................................................................................................................................115

The Ecological Society of Japan
Office & Editorial Committee: 1-8, Nishihanaikecho, Koyama, Kitaku, Kyoto 603-8148, Japan