Special Issue:
What Does 'the Decline in Crime Statistics' Tell about the Japanese Society?
Setsuo Miyazawa: Crime Rates in Developed Countries and International Interest in Japan ............................................................... 7
Shinichī Ishizuka: Has the Number of Crimes Dropped? What Caused the Reduction?:
Net-Widening of Crime Control and A New Priority System of Prosecution ....................................................................................... 36
Koichi Hamai: Why Has the Number of Crimes Reported to the Police Declined for 10 Years in Japan?
Is it a Real Reduction in Crime or Police Artifact? ......................................................................................................................... 53
Takayoshi Doi: Decrease in Juvenile Crime at the Dawn of Late Modern Society:
From the Viewpoint of Social Strain Theory and Cultural Learning Theory ........................................................................................ 78

Articles
Itsuro Okamura: The Birth of "Something Like Phantom Assailant" and the Problem of Crime Victims:
An Analysis of the Categorization Practices by Newspapers about the Compensation of Crime Victims .............................................. 110
Akihiko Sato: European Approach to Drug Problems and the Contemporary Decriminalized Control:
Some Trends and Implications in Harm Reduction ......................................................................................................................... 124
Yuki Takahashi: "Public and Private Collaboration" in the Probation System from the 1950s to the 1970s:
the Nature of Role Expectation for Private Probation Staff (hogoshi) .......................................................................................... 138
Yusuke Sakaguchi: Inter-temporal Comparative Analysis of Perceived Risk of Crime in the 2000s .................................................. 153
Megumi Yasuda: The Right to Die out of Prison ............................................................................................................................... 170

Research Trends
Kenji Takeuchi: An Overview of Amendments of the Juvenile law and Juvenile Training School Act .................................................. 186
Masahiro Tsushima: A Report of Recent Cross-National Studies of Homicide:
Tests of the Poverty-Homicide Thesis ................................................................................................................................................. 193
Daijiro Hida: Diversification and 'Deschool' of the Study of School Pathology .................................................................................. 199