Medical Entomology and Zoology

Studies on the Dipteran Insects

Contents

Reviews
Kurihara, T.: Malaria vectors in Japan (except Nansei Islands) .......................... 1–28
Takaoka, H.: Review on the classification, distribution and ecology of the black flies (Diptera: Simuliidae) of the Nansei Islands in Japan, with techniques for collection, slide-preparation, microscopic observation, and identification of adult, pupal and larval black flies ....................................................... 55–80

Original Papers
Toma, T., Miyagi, I., Malenganisho, W. L. M., Murakami, H., Nerome, H. and Yonamine, M.: Distribution and seasonal occurrence of Anopheles minimus in Matsuse, I. T., Nakamura, N., Sasnet, P., Hattori, M., Kamimura, K. and Funada, H.:
Amino acids and phosphates stimulate hatching of Ochlerotatus koreicoides
(Diptera: Culicidae) eggs ................................................................. 47–54
Kanmiya, K.: Flight properties of orthorrhaphous Brachycera flies in tethered flight performance (Insecta: Diptera) ......................................................... 109–120 Hayashi, T.: Description of a new species, Poecilosomella affinis (Diptera, Sphaeroceri-dae) from the Oriental and Australasian regions .................................. 121–127 Iwasa, M.: The immature stages of Steyskalomyza hasegawai Kurahashi, 1982 (Diptera; Dryomyzidae) from Japan .............................................................. 133–139
Mogi, M., Mano, T. and Sawada, I.: Records of Hippoboscidae, Nycteribiidae and Streblidae (Diptera) from Japan ....................................................... 141–165
Nishida, K.: Two new species (Diptera: Fanniidae) collected in the Imperial Palace, Tokyo, Japan ......................................................................... 173–180
Shinonaga, S.: Record of the muscid flies collected in Indonesia (Diptera, Muscidae) .... 181–212

(continued on back cover)