CONTENTS

Tomonori ICHIYANAGI: The Act of Listening by a Student Who Isn’t Good at Listening in the Classroom Lessons: from the Consideration on “Dialogue” by Bakhtin. .......................... 1

Tomomi HIRATA: The Practical Study of the Assessments of “Zone of Proximal Development”: Attempts of Dynamic Assessment in Elementary Mathematics Lessons .............................................................................................................. 13

Junichi HASEGAWA: Case Studies on Mathematics Classes with the Objective of Separation of Area and Perimeter of Geometric Figures ................................................................. 25

Yoshiko KITADA: The Process of Novice Teacher’s Learning Through In-house Lesson Study: Referring to the Concept of “Cognitive Apprenticeship” ......................................................... 37

Sanae TAKAHASHI: Modern meaning and practical usage of Educational Practice Record for “Reflective Practitioner”: By a conference of educational practice record ............................................................................................................ 49

Takahiro WATANABE: Significance of Teacher-in-Role as an Educational Method: through Analysis of Dorothy Heathcote’s Drama in Education ................................................................. 61

Etsuji YAMAGUCHI: A Study of “Ontological Innovation” as a Perspective on Theorization of Practices ...... 73

Shunta TOKUNAGA: A review on Studies of History Education in Italy: With Special Reference to the Relationship between History Research and History Education ....................................................... 85

Yusuke HIGUCHI: A Comparison between the Traditional “Lehrplan Forschung” and the “Curriculum Research” in 1970s in West Germany ........................................................................................................... 97

Shinichi USHIDA: Herbart’s “Educative Instruction” Theory as a Criticism of School: Herbart’s Criticism of School Based on the Pedagogical Logic and Its Pedagogical Meaning ........................................... 109

Noriko SUGIMOTO: A Study on “Gap” in the Classroom Learning: An examination of Kaoru Ueda’s concept of “gap” and an analysis of the class ................................................................. 121

Hideki SUGIURA: Kindergarten and Elementary School Cooperation in Takada City: Analyses of discussions of the Assembly for the Kindergarten and Elementary School Cooperation .................................................................................. 133

Yukiko NAGAE: The Interpretation of “Discipline” at the Elementary School Attached to the Nara Women’s Higher Normal School in the 1930’s ........................................................................... 145

Takashi KAWATSU: Mantaro Kido and Educational Broadcasting during the War ........................................ 157

Ikuo KAMI: Tadayoshi Sasaoka’s Theories on Tsuzurikata Education: Centering on functions of writing .................................................................................................................. 169

Noyuri ENDO, Motoaki NAKADA: A phenomenological study of the friend-relationships in the class community: From the viewpoint of the layers of the experience of someone else ............................................................ 181

Book Reviews ............................................................................................................................................. 193

Book Introduction ....................................................................................................................................... 207

Report of the 43rd Annual Conference of National Association for the Study of Educational Methods .......................................................... 209

Edited by National Association for the Study of Educational Methods