Following two major redesigns of Oral Medicine & Pathology (OMP) in the last five years, the journal is approaching yet another important milestone: soon it will merge with the Asian Journal of Oral and Maxillofacial Surgery. This latest change is being made in order to increase readership as well as to strengthen academic quality by attracting more papers. The new journal, entitled the Journal of Oral and Maxillofacial Surgery, Medicine, and Pathology (JOMSMP), will be published by Elsevier beginning in February 2012. The journal will be composed of three sections—oral and maxillofacial surgery, medicine, and pathology—with a different editor responsible for each section. I will serve as section editor for oral pathology, and while I am sorry to see the OMP era come to a close, I am pleased that the new JOMSMP will be a more international journal, recognized by the world-wide oral pathology community. As the Editor-in-Chief of OMP, I am very grateful to the readers and contributors for many years of warm and patient support, and I ask for your continued support and cooperation as the journal makes a fresh start as JOMSMP. In addition, I encourage each of you to submit an article to the new journal. The website can be found at http://www.elsevier.com/framework_products/promis_misc/JOMSMP_SDSS_Guide_Eng_2011.doc.
