Contents of Vol. 44 (2002)

Reviews
Stress Management in European Countries and US
KOBAYASHI, F. ........................................... 1
Stevens-Johnson Syndrome Accompanied by Acute Hepatitis in Workers Exposed to Trichlorethylene or Tetrachloroethylene
HISANAGA, N. et al. ........................................ 33
Employee Assistance Program
SHIMA, S. .................................................. 50
How Many Ergonomics Interventions Do We Have in the Field of Occupational Stress?
KUMASHIRO, M. .......................................... 87
Improvement of Work Environment
KAWAKAMI, N. ............................................ 95
The Reinstatement Criteria and Follow-up System after Returning to Work
NAKAGAWA, S. ........................................... 100
Stressor and Stress Reduction Strategies for Computer Software Engineers
ASAKURA, T. ............................................. 117
Stress Management in Large-scale Establishments
FUKASAWA, K. ........................................... 125
Stress Management for Office Workers
HAYASHI, T. .............................................. 175
Stress Management in Hospitals
MIKI, A. .................................................... 219

Originals
Relationship between Cigarette Smoking and Oral Health Status
IDE, R. et al. .............................................. 6
A Proposed Method for Evaluating Exposure Conditions from Measured Values When Sampling Duration Less than 8 Hours
KUMAGAI, S. et al. ....................................... 106
Relationship between the Augmentation Index of Central Artery Pressure and Health Examination Data
SAITO, M. .................................................. 131
Evaluation of a Swiveling Seat to Reduce the Physical Load on Forklift Drivers
TAODA, K. et al. ......................................... 180
The Present State and Forthcoming Problems in the Work of Occupational Health Physicians Engaged in the Workplace
TARUMI, K. et al. ........................................ 224

Short Communications
Modification of Serum Lipid Concentrations in Young Men Exposed to a Hot Environment
YAMAMOTO, H. et al. ................................. 12
Changes in Urea Cycle Enzymes in Rat Liver Caused by Inorganic Mercury
KIKUSHIMA, M. et al. ................................. 15

Case Study
A Case Study of Stress Management by Means of a Self Rating Stress Survey and Interviews with Employees
TANAKA, M. et al. ......................................... 17

Field Studies
Investigation of the Cab of Steam Locomotive from the Viewpoint of Occupational Health and Prevention of the Accident Occurred in the Cab —The Trouble on Karikatsu Tunnel—
TAKAKUWA, E. et al. ................................. 20
The Airborne 1,3-Butadiene Concentrations in Rubber and Plastic Processing Plants
YOSHIKI, T. et al. ......................................... 56
A Survey of Utilization of and Problems with the MSDS in Chemical Substances Management at Workplaces in Kanagawa Prefecture
KOSHI, K. et al. .......................................... 188
Willingness to Implement Mental Health Measures among Small-Scale Enterprise Employers in Ohta Ward, Tokyo, Japan
IKEDA, T. et al. .......................................... 200
An Example of Psychometric Validation of a Mental Health Questionnaire Used at a Work Place
KOJIMA, M. et al. ......................................... 236
Investigation of the Health Condition of the "Shukko" Person in a Certain Japanese Company
TOSHIMA, H. et al. .................................... 242

Occupational Health/Safety in the World
Trends in Research and Prevention Policies for Work-related Musculoskeletal Disorder at the European Agency for Safety and Health at Work (EU-OSHA)
NAKATA, M. ............................................. 64