Transactions of The Japan Society for Aeronautical and Space Sciences (Trans. of JSASS), the international journal published by the Japan Society for Aeronautical and Space Sciences (JSASS), will soon become an open access journal.

The journal is currently freely accessible and viewable by anyone. However, the conditions regarding use and reuse of content were not clear, and applicable parties had to request permission from the JSASS each time they wanted to reprint a chart or other content, which made secondary use difficult. Accordingly, the decision was made to change copyright management of the journal to a Creative Commons (CC) license that clearly stipulates reuse conditions and to transform the publication into a completely open access journal.

From September 1, 2021, papers submitted to Trans. of JSASS or accepted for publication will be published under a CC BY or CC BY-NC-ND license, and the author(s) will retain copyright(s) in the work. The CC licenses allow secondary uses, such as reproduction, without permission, as long as the name(s) of the author(s) and sources are clearly specified. However, under the CC BY-NC-ND license, content cannot be modified or used commercially without further permission. For more details, please see https://creativecommons.org/licenses/?lang=en.

JSASS will retain the copyright(s) for papers submitted to the journal on or before August 31, 2021, including those already published in Trans. of JSASS, and will consider requests for reuse and reprints of journal content.

As a result of the move to open access, we anticipate an increase in the dissemination of journal content, the number of citations, and the number of papers from authors whose funding conditions require publication in an open access journal.

We will endeavor to use this opportunity to further advance the academic journals of JSASS. We greatly appreciate your ongoing support.
