

Instructions to Authors

Journal of International Health

Notice to authors:

The English article function of JIH has been integrated into the Tropical Medicine and Health (TMH) since October, 2021, which is a Pubmed indexed Journal. However, papers accepted for publication in JIH at this time will not be indexed for publication in Pubmed. It will be indexed in the J-stage as well as in Japanese language articles. Also, we will not transfer papers that are currently under review in JIH to TMH. If you agree with those above terms, you can submit the article to JIH.

Please note that the requirement of JIH submission is to become a member of the Japan Association of International Health.

(This is for the authors who would like to submit an article written in English. For those who submit an article in Japanese, read Japanese-version of "Instructions for Authors".)

Journal of International Health is the quarterly official journal of the Japan Association for International Health. A key objective is to share information, learn what others learned, and discuss future challenges in research, intervention, field practice, education, management, and policy making in International Health, which promotes members' activities and further addresses international health issues.

While this journal pursues high quality articles in terms of science and art, with comprehensive and multidisciplinary aspects of international health the journal encourages members with various expertise and professions ranging from policy-making to field practice to submit articles from diverse perspectives such as politics, socio-economics and culture. Therefore, an article should be prepared in such a way to make field practitioners and other specialists understand.

Authors should prepare and submit manuscripts based on the following instructions. Research studies that include clinical trials are to conduct CTRs (clinical trial registry). Research studies that include RCTs (random controlled trials) must comply with the CONSORT statement (<http://www.consort-statement.org/>).

Refer to 'Uniform Requirements for Manuscripts Submitted to Biomedical Journals' issued by the International Committee of Medical Journal Editors (<http://www.icmje.org/> Accessed July 13, 2017) for those not included in the instructions.

1. Eligibility:

The first author should be the member of the Japan Association for International Health. Those who do not hold the membership of the Association ought to make an application for admission concurrently with the manuscript submission. Journal of International Health does not accept the manuscript that has been published or will be published elsewhere.

2. Research Ethics:

Research studies that have people as their subjects must comply with the Helsinki Declaration proposed by the World Medical. Before commencing the research, a research ethics committee, such as the organization with which the author is affiliated (or an organization involved in equivalent ethical screening) needs to approve the research plan. If necessary, research should be conducted after obtaining written consent from the subjects or their guardians by following the ethical standards of the country in which the research takes place. Furthermore, when presenting cases, sufficient consideration must be given in order to protect individuals' privacy so that they cannot be identified. Such ethical consideration and consideration given to research subjects, as well as reports of having conducted a research study adhering to the ethical standards of the country in which the research took place, if required, should always be mentioned in the Methods section and such when submitting the paper.

3. Types and formats of Articles:

As shown in Table 1, nine types of articles are considered for inclusion. In addition, articles that are invited by the Editorial Board could be published.

Structure and subdivision of the article are shown in Table 2.

4. Review of Manuscripts:

The Editorial Board reviews the submitted manuscripts by two board members and the councils and might refer back to the authors for revision within 6 months. Authors should send back the revised version that shows where changes have been made. If the referred-back manuscripts are not sent back for more than 3 months from the returning date, it is regarded as a withdrawal from the submission.

5. Conflicts of Interest

- All authors are required to disclose any financial relationship with any company or institution that might benefit from the publication of manuscript, only as it relate to the manuscript you are currently submitting by "Disclosure Form".
- If there is no relationship relevant to the manuscript's subject, indicate "The authors have no conflicts of interests."
- "Disclosure Form" is not disclosed to peer-reviewers.

6. Arrangement of Manuscripts:

With Word Documents as a general rule, English documents and abstracts must be double-spaced and must use font size 12. Page numbers should be included on the bottom right. Page numbers are not required for figures and tables. Numbers and text should be in half-size characters as a general rule.

1) The Cover Page: The submitted manuscript must have The Cover Page. It should contain the article title, the type of article, the number of pages (of tables, figures, and photographs), the number of necessary reprints (if reprints are unnecessary, write down "0"), the sending/billing address of reprints, the name of the author(s), the affiliated organization name(s), and the contact details of the corresponding author (address, phone number, fax number, and e-mail address) (any item that the author does not wish to be published should be mentioned after the publication of the paper becomes confirmed). Authors' name should be in order of 'First name Initial of Middle name. Surname' (eg. James C. Bond). Where co-authors are affiliated with different organizations, add 1) and 2) to the right of the authors' names and define the organization with which they are affiliated.

2) Names: Name of chemicals, scientific terms and foreign names should be written in the original languages. Generic names should be used for the name of medicines.

3) Units and Numbers: Units of measurements should be written as: mm, cm, ml, %, °C. Arabic numerals should be used for the numbers.

4) Figures, Tables and Photographs: Figures, tables, and photographs should be created individually. All of them should be numbered (Figure 1, Table 1, Photograph 1) consecutively in Arabic numerals. The location in which each file is to be inserted should be indicated in the body by writing <insert Figure 1> and such. Title should be indicated in each figure, table and photograph. Addition to the title, brief explanation may be cited if necessary. Each figure, table, and photograph will be treated as being equivalent to 200 words.

7. References:

The references should be consecutively numbered in order that they are first mentioned in the text. All the references should be listed in the end of the text. Reference numbers such as 1), 2), 3)··· should be marked at the upper right of the corresponding part in the text. In principle, abbreviation should not be used for the title of Japanese journals. Abbreviation of the non-Japanese journals may conform to "Index Medicus." Up to six authors of a reference ought to be cited. In case of more than six authors, use "et al" after the citation of three authors. Followings are some examples of references. Other details are found in the AMA Manual of Style.
